SCHOONER WENT ON THE USUAL REEF LAST NIGHT

The Skipper Did Not Hear the Bellbuoy and Miscalculated His Position—Fearless Wants $5,000 for Salvage—Tide Very Low.

Hard and fast in a coral bed on the "Clavering Reef" the little 248-ton three-masted schooner Ottilie Fjord spent the night in a vain effort to free herself and slide back into deep water. The schooner, with 240,000 feet of lumber from Eureka, piled up on the reef at 6:10 p. m. and at a late hour had not moved from her dangerous position.

The Fjord lies in about thirteen feet of water close to the breakers, and about opposite the breakwater of the naval reservation. With relation to the buoys, the vessel is between the two and slightly to Eward of the bell buoy.

Once more the bell buoy is in a measure responsible for the schooner's predicament, for the captain and crew found the bell voiceless.

If the wind keeps a steady blow offshore and the sea continues with a steady swell all through the night, the schooner will get the benefit of high tide at about 5 o'clock this morning which should enable her to escape. She has her jibs and foresail set and the wind last night belled them out toward the stern and port side, and even if this does not aid the vessel in getting off the reef it will prevent her from driving farther on.

The tug Fearless went out about 7:30 and at 9 straightened out a spliced steel and manila hawser between herself and the schooner and began to pull. Twenty minutes later the hawser snapped at the splice and the tug drew away to make repairs. Another line was got aboard, but nothing more was done up to the hour of going to press.

When the Fearless went out to the Ottilie Fjord there was some discussion between Captain Olssen of the tug and Capt. Bosch of the schooner as to salvage. Capt. Olssen proposed to Capt. Bosch to draw the boat off for $5,000, which offer was refused. The matter will probably be adjusted in the courts.

An Advertiser reporter went to the schooner shortly before 9 and found her heeled somewhat over on the port side with the Fearless astern and to the Ewa side straightening out the hawser. The crew was taking matters coolly on the top of the deck load of lumber, smoking pipes and awaiting developments. Capt. Bosch was also calm, and found time to pet his dog. Capt. McCauley, the pilot, was also aboard, having reached the schooner after she grounded.

"I was coming along here about 6 o'clock," said Capt. Bosch, "and was just going to anchor, when the schooner slid upon the reef. I had my mainsail down, and was about to drop the foresail and jibs. I have been in Honolulu harbor many times and have never before had any trouble. I simply got too close in, in picking out my anchorage. I usually go towards the west side of the channel so that the red light is on the right of the green."

"I did not hear the bell in the bell buoy ring."

Capt. McCauley, the pilot, said that the schooner was reported at the pilot's office about 5:20, and shortly afterward he went out in the pilot boat. He noticed the schooner getting too far in and he quickened the rower's pace, believing that the schooner captain was getting into dangerous waters. As he neared the vessel Capt. McCauley yelled to the men on deck, but too late, for the schooner just then struck.

The pilot returned to town for aid and got the Fearless out. Capt. Fuller, the harbor master, also went out to the boat. The first hawser, steel and hemp, broke after twenty minutes pulling, smashing in a skylight and the cabin companionway and door. A new hawser was bent on later. Occasionally a heavy swell lifted the schooner and dropped her down on the reef with a thud. Despite this bumping no leakages were found, the pumps being sounded often.

The Ottilie Fjord is about twelve years old, and has been commanded by Capt. Bosch for about six years.

Pilot McCauley remained aboard the vessel for the night.

A HISTORIC HANDKERCHIEF.

James L. Yates, a policeman in Oxford, Ala., has recently come into possession of one of the famous "Tippecanoe and Tyler too" handkerchiefs used during the presidential campaign which resulted in the election of William Henry Harrison and John Tyler as president and vice president of the United States. The souvenir came into the possession of Mr. Yates' grandmother sixty-four years ago, who preserved it till her death a short time since.

PRACTICED LAW FIFTY-EIGHT YEARS.

Ex-Congressman E. B. Taylor, of Warren, O., who succeeded James A. Garfield as representative in congress on the advance of the latter to the presidency, has just completed the fifty-eighth year of his practice of the law. It is said that no other lawyer in Ohio is able to show so many years of activity in the profession.

ALFONSO KILLED A BULL.

King Alfonso, of Spain, recently distinguished himself by shooting a ferocious bull stampeded from a herd that was being driven through the streets of Madrid. The incident is given publicity in Spain as illustrating the young monarch's courage and marksmanship and his ability to defend himself if attacked by assassins.

FAITHFUL FOR SEVENTY YEARS.

A New Jersey spinster, aged 94, has kept green in her heart the memory of a lover who died seventy years ago, admitting no rival there and attributing her longevity primarily to her fidelity, and after that to her all around aversion to doctors, never having had one called in since her debut.

Medium (at spiritualistic seance)—"Is Mr. Keelicks present? His deceased wife wishes to communicate with him." Mr. Keelicks (in an agitated voice)—"Tell her I'd rather not. I'm married again."—Chicago Tribune.

His failure: "Do you know anything about flirting?" "No," he replied, sadly; "I thought I did, but when I tried it, hanged if the girl didn't marry me."—Chicago Post.

BELL BUOY FAILS TO FULFILL OFFICE

Apropos of the statement of Captain Bosch of the schooner Ottilie Fjord that had he heard the bell buoy he would have saved his ship, local yachtsmen state that the sound of the bell, whether from improper hanging or fault in the metal or casting, is so weak as to be rarely distinguishable.

The bell buoy is one of the marks generally included in local yacht racing courses and the contesting boats frequently round the buoy within a very few feet. On returning from cruises, the buoy is picked up, as long as daylight lasts, as an opening to the channel and a guide to bring the range lights in proper bearing when dusk is falling.

Allan Dunn, chairman of the Hawaii Yacht Club regatta committee, has rounded the buoy scores of times at all hours and weathers and has heard the bell sounding but once and that faintly. This statement is substantiated by other yachtsmen of yet longer experience with the buoy and is corroborated by the local pilots.

It will be remembered that the captain of the Clavering, wrecked some months since, filed a complaint on this score and the buoy was overhauled, but apparently without appreciable improvement.

CAPE HORN WAS A HOODOO

After being at sea for nearly eight months the German bark Atlantic arrived in port yesterday morning from Bremen, via Valparaiso. The Atlantic left her home port on February 14, and has since met with a series of mishaps which accounts for the long, weary months consumed on the voyage. Soon after leaving Bremen, a sailor named Drinkhouse fell overboard in the North Sea and was lost. He was on the jibboom at the time. Two months of the voyage were lost in rounding the Horn. The vessel encountered a terrific gale on June 1 at night. On June 2 the foretopmast and all the yards and sails on the mast were carried away and several of the sails on the mainmast were also lost. The decks were covered with ice and snow while rounding the Horn. The Atlantic was then compelled to put in at Valparaiso, remaining there several weeks undergoing repairs.

The vessel brought a general cargo for H. Hackfeld & Co.
